

Just a Few Discussion Ideas

1. What are the strengths and weaknesses of Levitt's research methods?
2. Levitt says that "morality is the way we want the world to be and economics is the way the world really is". Do you think a sociologist, psychologist or theologian would agree with him?
3. Do you think his findings or conclusions are valuable?
4. Do you think his set of observation "tools" might limit his observations in some way?
5. If you could ask Levitt one question, what would you ask him?
6. Why do you think Professor Siegel wanted you to read this book?
